“ I knew Kermit prior to his coming on hospice service, when he was a resident at Harmony Commons and I was the social worker seeing clients there. He always said hello and was eager to let me know what was going on in his life. Once he joined us, it was a great privilege to spend time with him. Whether I was accompanying him on a walk outside the facility, or talking with him in his room, he shared his thoughts and feelings about many things. He was a unique person and I glad I was able to be a part of his life. He will be missed.
