“ Erlinda, I and several others were a group of good friends that hung out together, in high school. In addition, our families knew each other because my mother and Julie, her mom, worked together, and Julie had also babysat for my young niece while my sister finished high school. Although I sometimes run into Julie, and see Johnny and Marty and Mary (I ended up babysitting her kids one summer long ago, as well), Erlinda moved to the Racine area, and we didn't get a chance meet again in many years, with her and I raising families, etc. I wish we could have met again, and another friend and I had talked recently about going to see her together. It's too late for that, regrettably, but I can remember the fun times we had back then, and the conversations we had on FB in the last few years, and yes, her funny posts.

One clear high school memory that I have, is when we skipped out early to lunch by a mod (20 min), in which we had done before (skipped study hall before lunch). A group of us, including Erlinda, were walking by the sledding hill on Washington St. My then boyfriend rolled up in his car, upset that I had not spent lunch with him, as he thought, demanded I get in the car. Erlinda knew it wasn't a good idea for me to get in the car, given his state of mind, and past history. She was yelling at him like nobody's business, telling him to get out there, to leave me alone, that I wasn't getting in the car, even standing between him and I. I eventually did get in the car (mistake) and I felt bad leaving my friends worried about me, but I didn't want to involve them any further. But I will never forget how she went to bat for me, even trying to hold me from going in the car, and telling him and me I wasn't going to get in the car. She could be so fiesty!!

I look back at that memory, and appreciate her sticking up for me in such a way. I guess that showed what a loyal friend she was.

I have other memories, and more "fiesty" memories, fun at mixers, and yes, her Quinceañera (ripped my dress we were being so silly), but this is the one that sticks out the most at this point and time, and *demonstrates an important part of Erlinda's character.

Thanks again, Erlinda, for sticking up for me, and I hope there are plenty of fun things to do up there, with no pain or illness getting in your way! Hope to see you again someday....*
