“ Gramps -

I can't believe your not here anymore to watch movies and wrestling with me. All the laughs we had over wrestling and teasing each other, not hearing you say "Oh me, Oh my" all day long haha.

I really miss you gramps - my buddy - my friend. Remember gramps all the ice cream we would eat? And me and grandma would eat up all the mash potatoes and we would laugh and have a good time with it all.

I will always have these great memories of you and Gramma and I am glad I had Grandparents like you both!!

I know you and Gramma are together again in Heaven with Jesus laughing, and singing, and young again with no more worries and pain, and being happy forever. That makes me smile :)

I love you both forever, Nick

“ Dad

I know i have not been around much over the last 40 years, but you were always in my heart. You and mom have been my parents, and did a good job raising me until i went into the Marines. I know you were proud of me, and that meant a lot to me, i know you were a little upset when i re-enlisted and didn't follow the pharmacist career that i started before the service, but you and mom were still proud of me and supported me. I know you didn't worry about me because you knew i would be okay in life and still make it and have faith in me. I am sure glad i got to spend time with you and mom last summer when Cathy and me were there. I wanted to come out a lot more but my job kept me away, and you were proud of what i did. Mom surprised us and left this world before i could come out for a visit. At least i got to spend some some quality time with you then and go over a lot of old memories. I wish you could of lasted a little longer so that i could of spend more time with you before you left to be with mom. I know you are happy again, and no longer have to miss her. I wish i was able to spend more time with you over the years, i just want to let you know even though i didn't take your name, i loved you, and you set a excellent role model for me, and i set my life around your beliefs, and your examples. I am trying to pass those unto my kids and grand kids as you did me. I will always love you and look up to you. I want you to know that you were a excellent dad.

Love always your son Floyd.

“ Dad~

It is surreal that your gone and just 4 months after mom's passing. I know how much you missed mom and always said "I miss mom, we had such fun together, she was such a good person, I really miss her". It broke my heart to see you so sad and thinking you didn't have a purpose anymore without her. I know how you always cared for mom and made sure she was alright. Words can't express how much I miss you, and your stories, and how I loved watching you and Nick play around and tease each other and all the birthdays we had together with you and Mandy. Then you got sick with one thing after another happening and I felt like my prayers were not being answered; but then I realized that what you wanted most was to be with mom. So I told myself to prepare for that battle. We brought you home for hospice and each day was worse than the other until you finally slipped away peacefully in your sleep. I hope now Dad that you and Mom are in Heaven together again laughing, and singing, and young once again in the presence of our Lord. I am so proud of the accomplishments that you have achieved throughout your life being in the Navy that you liked to talk about so much, and being a fireman, and all the childhood memories that you gave me. You will be truly missed and forever in my heart ~ both you and mom!!!

Love from your daughter, Linda

“ Grandpa~

No words could ever explain how I am feeling today. 4 months ago when Grandma passed away we were all shocked and all felt lost without her. A part of me felt relief in the fact that she no longer had to suffer and the other part, being obvious, I was sad because I was no longer going to walk in the house and see her. Today, I can't help but feel the same way. For 28 years I have shared my birthday with you and it was always our special day we had together. To think I no longer will have your physical presence here every birthday, now brings me sadness. I always loved hearing your life stories whether it be from when you were in the military or about mom growing up and about the many movies you have seen or even about Grandma and how much you loved her. You always made me laugh every day I seen you and I just loved how goofy you would get. I still remember when I was a little girl and would bug you while you sat in your chair watching TV and you would tickle me until I couldn't breathe. I have so many memories of you and Grandma and they will forever remind me of how truly blessed I was to have Grandparents like you. You were a man of honor, courage and a great role model for everyone and you loved your wife to no end. Grandpa, you both will be terribly missed. I know you both are happy together again and in each others arms. For now, there will be no good-bye's, only til I see you again. I love you!
