“ "Miss Parker" was my second grade teacher at Lincoln School. That year, she had a contest in her classroom to see who could read the most books. Reading 102 books, I was the winner and was given a great prize: a book! To this day, I credit her with giving me a life-long love of reading. I was also privileged to attend her wedding, since her husband, Gay, worked at Walker Forge for my dad, Don Kamm, at the time. She will always be one of my favorite teachers. Girls: you were blessed with a great Mom.

“ Although I had not seen Shirley for years, I knew her back in the 1970's as a fellow grade school teacher. She was always so gracious and helpful. At one point, Shirley invited a number of us over to her home on Erie, and every time I have driven down the drive to Siena Center, I have thought of her. I just wanted you to know what a positive impression she left on me.
